

ERRATUM

In my section on The Major Cards, at page 34, I have a great deal of fun at the expense of the makers of the James Bond movie "Live And Let Die." In the shooting of this film, they made a big, silly mistake as you shall see when you get there. And what did I do? I made an even bigger and sillier mistake.

In the film, Secret Agent 007 encounters a mysterious Tarot reading woman. This reader goes by the name of SOLITAIRE. So what did I do? I called her... DOMINO. I somehow managed to get dominoes mixed up with Tarot cards and, worse yet, I confused Bond Girls. The character Domino appears in the film "Thunderball" starring the incomparable Sean Connery as 007, yet I moved her over into a later Roger Moore film. For that, I will have to hand over my exploding attaché case to the dour Major Boothroyd, aka "Q."

I have fixed this glaring error in subsequent volumes of Rev. Eliot's Magickal Window. So congratulations for possessing one of the rare DOMINO copies of the book. I have no doubt that this incorrect edition shall, in years to come, attain rare collectors' status. Or maybe I just hope it will, just to cover up a whopping mistake...

Blessings,
